Valued Customer,

Our deepest condolences go out to all the people of Japan following the tragic earthquake and subsequent tsunami that struck northern Japan.

At this time, Littelfuse is working to understand all impacts to our supply chain as a result of this tragedy. Littelfuse does not have manufacturing operations in Japan, and we can confirm none of our facilities were directly impacted by the earthquake. Our direct supply base is limited in Japan, but we are working to confirm the status of our entire supply chain.

At this time, we have identified some short-term logistics challenges moving materials in and out of Japan, but no short-term interruptions to our manufacturing operations. We have not identified any direct suppliers that sustained meaningful damage to their operations that supply Littelfuse. We are still working to confirm that our global suppliers' operations are not impacted by disruptions in their supply chain.

If we become aware of any specific supply interruption that will impact our ability to deliver products, we will contact the specific customers affected. If you have specific questions, please contact your normal Littelfuse contact.

Best regards,
Dave Heinzmann
Vice President of Global Operations
